DEATH OF H. F. POOR

Varied Career Brought to a Close.

Facts About the Life History of a Man Who Once Held Important Local Offices.

The death of Mr. Henry Poor, while not unexpected by his immediate friends, came as a surprise to most of the community. Mr. Poor died yesterday morning at 6 o'clock after an illness extending over two years. He was well known in Honolulu and throughout the Islands, having since his youth held many positions of private and public trust, up to the beginning of revolutionary days and the overthrow of the monarchy, of which he was a supporter.

Henry Poor was the eldest son of Mrs. C. F. Bush of this city. He was born here June 8, 1856, and was 43 years of age at the time of his death. Mr. Poor received his early education under Mr. Gulick, Sr., father of the late Charles T. Gulick of Honolulu. He afterwards attended Punahou College, at that time under the direction of Professor Church. He left school, however, at the age of 15 and entered the banking house of Bishop & Co. as a clerk, where he remained about eight years. At that time, owing to ill health, Mr. Poor first visited the United States, where he spent some three months. When he returned to Honolu-lulu he entered the mercantile house of Castle & Cooke.

At this time he was selected by the Government to act as secretary to Hon.

C. P. Iaukea, the head of the Hawaiian Embassy to the coronation of Alexander III, of Russia. Continuing from there he made a tour of the world, visiting the greater part of Europe, India,

Japan, Egypt, the United States and England and meeting many great personages there. His visit to India was immediately connected with the question of securing a labor supply for the plantations of Hawaii.

While abroad Mr. Poor received several foreign decorations, among which were the Order of the Rising Sun of Japan, the Order of Simon Bolivar of South America, an Austrian and a Russian order and several others. He also held the Hawaiian Order of Crown of Hawaii and Order of Kapiolani. During his absence in foreign lands he wrote long letters to his mother descriptive of his travels which are said to be very interesting, showing as they did how a native Hawaiian was impressed with foreign customs and progress.

Upon his return Mr. Poor became a clerk in the Supreme Court, taking the place of Mr. Fife, where he remained until he was transferred to the Postal Savings Bank. He there began the system of bookkeeping which is still continued in use.

Shortly after his return from his first visit to the United States he fell heir to the sum of $15,000 from the George Peabody estate. This money he invested in the Kapahulu ranch, near Diamond Head, which was recently purchased by W. C. Achi & Co.

During the time Mr. Poor was employed in the postoffice and savings bank he was selected to act as secretary of Mr. J. E. Bush, head of the famous Samoan Embassy. It was in this capacity that Mr. Poor very nearly lost his life in dealing with the mutinous crew of the Kaimiloa. He was seized by the mutineers one day as he boarded the vessel alone, thrown to the deck and his life threatened with drawn weapons, but at that moment the sound of coming oars was heard which startled the crew and allowed him to escape. The new-comers were from the German cruiser Olga. Mr.

Poor defended himself, aided by the Germans and others aboard the vessel, and soon dispersed the rioters.

It is related by his friends that when Henry was about 15 years of age he received as a present a printing press from his uncle in New York, upon which he printed a small sheet called the Punahou Journal, a college newspaper. The paper was published at the Poor homestead, which, at that time, stood upon the ground now occupied by the Club stables on Fort street. Mr.

Edward Poor, the uncle mentioned

Park Bank of New York.

During his various travels over the world Mr. Poor indulged his taste for collecting; and, until he met business reverses a few years ago, was the owner of a treasury of curios and fine paintings. He was a member of the Hawaiian Historical Society, to which, at different times, he made generous donations of rare historical documents.

After his return from Samoa Mr. Poor again entered the Postal Savings Bank, where he remained for some time, and then turned his attention to ranching, which he followed until failing health and business reverses caused his retirement from active life.

HAWAIIAN VERSES.

A New Holiday Book of Poetry by Philip H. Dodge.

Philip Henry Dodge of this city has issued a small volume of poems entitled "Hawaii Fair and Other Verses," which the Woman's Exchange offers to the public. The little book is handsomely gotten up and the verses are genre pictures of island scenes and bits of Hawaiian sentiment, some of which are already familiar to our readers. The musical quality of the work may be judged from this stanza of "Hawaii Fair," written to the tune of the national hymn:

Land of the lava's flow, Lit by the crater-glow, Steeps where the waters flow, Misty in air;
Crags of the starry height, Plains in their golden light,
These are thy visions bright, Hawaii fair!

STREET LIGHTING.

Minister Young on a New Plan to Avoid Future Mishaps.

The street lighting problem will evidently remain unsolved until the reservoirs in Nuuanu valley above the Government electric light plant are again filled. Minister of Interior Young has endeavored to relieve the present danger to pedestrians and vehicles during the dark nights, and especially while the streets in the business section are being torn up for public works, and had hoped to contract with the Hawaiian Electric Company for supplying sufficient current to run the dynamos of the Government plant, but upon consultation with the manager of the company, it was found that this could not be done as the wiring to the Government plant was insufficient to carry the necessary current. All the incandescent lights in the Government buildings, however, will be supplied with power, but not the are lamps.

Mr. Young says that the only method which can be adopted to avoid the difficulties of street lighting occasioned by drought and empty reservoirs, is to erect a steam plant in conjunction with the water-power, so that one plant could relieve the other as the occasion arises. Such a plant should be erected as early as possible, but nothing can be done in the matter until next year, if an appropriation is made for that purpose.

Many citizens now carry lanterns when they venture abroad, and even if this primitive method were adopted on the business streets where there is so much danger confronting night pedestrians, and large lanterns were hung on the street corners, much of the present discomfort would be done away with.

If you wish to see the effect of scientific workmanship have horses shod at Stock-yards shop.
